The Tower
Hidden in the bushes
The end of an unknown path
Fairyland

Monday 21st June

My dearest Charming,

I hope that this letter finds you well. I am writing because I have had an idea on how I can escape this tower that I wanted to run past you.

It was truly delightful to see you last week (even if there was a large drop between us!). I know that we only had a short window of time before Old Witch Face returned but I do feel as though we made some progress! OK, so the basket wasn't strong enough to hold me and all of my possessions but we can work on that.

So, I've been thinking. What we really need is a way to lift me down from this wretched tower after my possessions have been safely lowered. I know that we've tried climbing, baskets, using my unlimited amount of hair and even digging but none of that has worked. But, what if we tried flying?!

I know what you're thinking, 'Rapunzel's had one of her hare-brained ideas again!' but that's not the case! I'm not talking about suddenly sprouting wings but about making a parachute! All I need is some strong, light material. We can use the basket from my last escape attempt to pull it up into the tower and then, I'll sew it into a parachute and harness!

Finally, we'll be reunited! I'll simply float down safely towards the ground while you look up at me in admiration. I just hope that you can find suitable material in time for your next visit.

I look forward to seeing you soon,

Rapunzel

P.S. If you're given a choice of fabric colours, go for green. That way, I'll be camouflaged!
